DETAILED ACTION

1. Claims 1-11 are pending.

Election /Restriction

2. Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. § 121:
 - Group I, consisting of claims 1-5 drawn to a device to detect airborne particles, classified under Class 95, subclass 214, for example.
 - Group II, consisting of claims 1-2 and 6-8 drawn to a conglomerate comprising different unit operation apparatuses housed in a trailer/recreational vehicle and said conglomerate applicable to analyze a biological sample, classified under Class 55, subclass 385.2, for example.
 - Group III, consisting of claims 1-2 and 9-11 drawn to a method to detect airborne biological pathogens, classified under Class 435, subclass 30, for example.
3. The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:

Inventions in Groups I and III are unrelated to each other because they are directed to different inventions that are not connected in design, operation and/or effect. These inventions are independent since they are not disclosed as capable of use together. They have different modes of operation, they have different functions, and/or they have different effects. One would not have to practice the various methods at the same time to practice just one method alone (MPEP § 806.04, MPEP § 808.01). In the instant case, for example inventions disclosed in claims encompassing invention in Group I are directed to a device to determine any type of airborne particles, while invention encompassing claims for group III is a focused method to detect only the airborne pathogens regardless of what device or methods are employed to detect those pathogens.

Invention in Group II is related to inventions in Groups I and III as product (i.e., apparatus/operational units) and use thereof. The inventions can be shown to be distinct if either or both of the following can be shown: (1) the process for using the product as claimed can be practiced with another materially different product or (2) the product as claimed can be used in a materially different process of using that product [MPEP § 806.05(h)]. The process/method encompassed in inventions of Group I and III can be accomplished with any device (e.g., a n air pump) to collect the airborne samples and then taking those samples to a microbiology lab to identify the biological sample applying standard microbial identification apparatus and techniques. Similarly, apparatus conglomerate of Group II invention already exist and is appropriately utilized in identification of a wide variety of samples, e.g., those obtained from sites where energetic /explosives have been used or stored.

The inventions discussed above are independent and distinct, each from the other. They have acquired a separate status in the art as a separate subject for inventive effect and require independent searches. The search for each one of the above inventions is not coextensive particularly with regard to the literature search. Further, a reference that would anticipate the invention of one group would not necessarily anticipate or even make obvious another group. Finally, the consideration for patentability is different in each case. Thus, it would be an undue burden to examine all of the above inventions in one application.

Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art as shown by their different classification (i.e., class and subclass), and their recognized diverse subject matter, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.

4. Applicant is reminded that upon cancellation of claims to a non-elected invention, inventorship must be amended in compliance with 37 CFR 1.48(b) if one or more of the currently named inventors is no longer an inventor of at least one claim remaining in the application. Any amendment of inventorship must be accompanied by a petition under 37 CFR 1.48(b) and by the fee required under 37 CFR 1.17(I).

5. Applicant is advised that the reply to this requirement to be complete must include an election of the invention to be examined even though the requirement is traversed (37 CFR 1.143).
